Clearfield County Is 116 Years Old Today

COUNTY ERECTED MARCH 26, 1804

CLEARFIELD COUNTY 116 YEARS OLD (By J. FRANK SNYDER.)

"Clearfield County, named from the stream, Clearfield Creek, running through the county, into a western branch of the Susquehanna" was erected March 26, 1804, out of parts of Huntingdon and Lycoming counties. Clearfield county, therefore, today celebrates her 116th anniversary. There is not a single person living today who resided here at the time the county was erected. Mrs. Anna Gulich Halsey born May 5, 1816, in Lawrence township, is still with us and, so far as is known, is the first person born in the county to pass the century mark.

On August 8, 1804, the court, by its order, created an election district which embraced the entire county, under the name of Chincelamoux township. By the year 1818, this township had disappeared from the map and in its stead there were six new townships, namely: Beccaria, Bradford, Covington, Gibson, Lawrence and Pike. A part of Gibson was afterwards taken in the erection of Elk; a portion of the territory within the original limits of the county was added to Jefferson. Today we have one city; 19 boroughs; 30 townships; the "District of Pine," divided into 96 election districts.

In 1818 a writer in the course of his "Description," in speaking of its towns said:

"Clearfield town, which is intended for the seat of justice contains in addition to a brick court house not quite finished, 5 dwelling houses. The West branch of the Susquehanna washes the west part of the town and forms its front—

"Curwensville has 4 houses.

"Karthaus has 4 houses. Near this village (which is of very recent date) iron works have been erected and other important improvements are progressing fostered by the care of the industrious and spirited proprietor." Mr. Burrows in his "State Book of Pennsylvania," says that "At Karthaus so called from the name of the original proprietor, the first successful attempt was made in Pennsylvania to smelt iron by means of bituminous coal."

By the provisions of the act erecting the county it was attached to Centre for judicial purposes. The act of January 29, 1822, directed "That upon the third Monday of October next and thereafter, the courts shall be opened and held at the court house, now erected in Clearfield town." The courts were held as directed and from and after that date the county was organized for all purposes.

Soon after the complete organization of the county, in 1822, a deep interest was awakened in educational matters and being of so great concern to the settlers is entitled to mention in almost every article on the development of the county. The pioneers here constructed the mandate of the Constitution of 1790 enjoining "the establishment of schools throughout the State in such manner that the poor may be taught gratis" to mean that central schools or academies should be established in each county. They accordingly secured the passage of an act entitled "An Act establishing an Academy in the town of Clearfield." The old Academy was erected and schools opened in it in the fall of 1830. During the period of its existence as an academic institution (1830-1874) it was noted as a school for the higher education of both sexes, and exercised an influence for good throughout the entire county. A glance at the courses of instruction will give some idea of the high character of that institution, and of the foundation it laid for good citizenship. The "Course of Instruction," according to the "Catalogue" for 1854-5 embraced the branches following:

are required of all throughout the entire course.

Composition and Declamation are alternate weekly exercises, from which none, who are adequate to the task, are excused, except in cases of sickness. Failure to perform these duties will rapidly lower the standing.

A writer in speaking of the county, in 1832 said:

"This county is yet thinly settled, but it grows in population rapidly. In 1810 it had 875 inhabitants; in 1820, 2342; in 1830, 4803, of whom 2485 were white males, 2265 females; 28 free colored males, 25 free colored females. Included in the foregoing were, 24 aliens, 6 deaf and dumb and 3 blind."

The steady increase in population will appear from the table following:

Population of Clearfield County	1810-1920
1810	875
1820	2,342
1830	4,803
1840	7,834
1850	12,586
1860	18,759
1870	25,741
1880	43,408
1890	69,965
1900	80,614
1910	93,768
1920	(estimated) 105,000

In 1845 the assessed value of property in the county was, $798,329; in 1910 it was $20,685,203; in 1919 it was $22,224,920 or almost 28 times what it was in 1845. And in May the voters will be asked to authorize a $1,000,000 bond issue for the improvement of the roads in the county.

KENTUCKY LAD KIDNAPPED IS LOCATED

Two Year Old Paul Little Out-
wits Kidnappers By Telephoning Home Folks

LOCKED UP SINCE WEDNESDAY

LEXINGTON, March 26.—Paul, Little, 12 year old son of E. R. Little, wealthy oil man, who was kidnapped from the Federal building here last Wednesday, was found by his mother in a room in the Phoenix Hotel here early today. The boy was unharmed. He himself made a telephone call which resulted in his rescue. The kidnappers escaped. One of the two men who was with the boy, had just left him and escaped down one elevator as the mother and a number of friends came up in another elevator. The package containing $25,000, placed by the father in a garbage can in an alley in the heart of Lexington, was untouched.

The child's parents had resigned themselves to wait for some communication from the abductors. The Little telephone rang early today and Mrs. Little answered. "This is Paul. I am in the Phoenix Hotel," he said. The mother did not wait for details. With her other son she dashed out of the house, followed by her husband. They hailed an automobile and rushed to the hotel. "Is my boy here?" she cried as she entered the lobby. No one had seen the child. Inquiry at the telephone switchboard showed a message had been sent from room 651. A number of friends had gathered in the lobby and the party started for room 651 on one of the elevators. As the party reached the sixth floor another elevator started down. A lone man occupied the car. He was believed to be one of the abductors. Room 651 was locked, but the door was opened with difficulty and Paul rushed into his mother's arms. The boy said he had been held in the room ever since he was taken in the Post office Wednesday. A large part of the time he was locked in the bath room.

HOT CAKES FROM CLEARFIELD GO. THE NEWS PAN FOLKS PREPARED QUICKLY SERVED FOR 1920 CENSUS

OUR TROOPS NOT IN ZONE OF STRIFE

WASHINGTON, March 26.—President Wilson will inform Congress in response to the Kahn resolution that the troops on the Rhine will not participate in any advance in Germany to quell internal strife it was believed today. The Kahn resolution called on the President to inform Congress the exact status of the American troops in Germany. Wilson is expected to point out that the American troops are in the Rhine district in accordance with the terms of the armistice.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE FACES CRISIS

DOVER, Del., March 26.—Opponents of the federal woman's suffrage amendment in the Delaware legislature planned to call up the ratification measure for a vote today. If the measure is called up today suffragists fear their case would be lost here. They hoped to postpone the vote several days to try to win over several additional votes for the measure.

ORDER BEING RESTORED IN GERMANY

BERLIN, March 26.—Night—Government advisers here today indicated continued success of their efforts to restore order throughout Germany. The situation in the Rhine provinces is quieting, officials said. They affirm early reports that the government has completed an agreement with at least a majority of the insurgent workers' group.

COAL SCALE MEETING MONDAY AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 26.—The general scale committee of the bituminous coal miners and a similar committee of the operators will meet here Monday to consider the new wage agreement according to announcement by Philip Murray, International Vice President of the United Mine Workers of America.

ANTI LEAGUE PARTY LOOMS

WASHINGTON, March 26.—"An anti-League of Nations party" is being considered, it was learned today. The plan is to have its own candidate unless one of the old party goes on record as being irreconcilably opposed to the provisions of the covenant. The men backing the new movement have been trying for weeks to get Senator Borah from Idaho to allow himself to be named their candidate. Borah has refused. "I am not a candidate for the presidency and will not be so long as Senator Johnson runs for the Republican nomination," Borah said today. It was the only comment he would make on the Anti-League party idea.

WOULD TAX STOCK DIVIDENDS

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, today introduced a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution making stock dividends taxable.

SILENCE OF WILSON HINDERS DEMOCRATS

WASHINGTON, March 26.—House Democrats are rebelling against the continued silence of President Wilson on the question of a third term. Dissatisfaction apparently is rampant among the Democrats because while the Republican candidates are conducting lively booms Democratic campaign planners are in a state of uncertainty due to the fact that no word has been sent by the party to the White House. Although President Wilson's health might not permit of a campaign necessary for the seeking of a third term it is believed by some Congressmen that he might ask renomination on the ground that it is necessary to have the peace treaty. House leaders have started a campaign to force the President's hand. This action was started when Representative Humphreys of Mississippi, introduced a resolution with the approval of virtually all Demo-

3032 "Little Bunches of Sunshine" Arrived During 1819 via Dr. Stork To Boost Total

THREE BIRTHS TO ONE DEATH

Clearfield county people were not unmindful of the fact that Uncle Sam had arranged for his "every ten year count of noses" to take place at the beginning of the year 1920, and no doubt from a spirit of county pride in numbers and for sundry other good and sufficient reasons managed to provide themselves during the twelve months last past with a sum total of 3032 babies.

In other words and "to get down to cases," as it were, there was nothing slow about Clearfield county people and even though the per centage of births was higher in the earlier history of the county, last year's harvest of "little bunches of sunshine" was not so worse, and goes to show that "race suicide" does not have much of a hold in many sections of Clearfield county. You can judge of all affected sections from the following list of births and deaths for the different districts for 1919. It shows that approximately one out of every three couples in the county entertained old Dr. Stork during the year.

During the same twelve months 1315 deaths occurred or about one out of each hundred Clearfield county residents died during the year, which is also a healthy showing.

Clearfield County In The Revolution

(This paper was prepared and read by Miss Mary Swoope, of Curwensville, at a recent meeting of the local D. A. R. chapter.)

During the years of the struggle of the American Colonies for independence the territory now known as Clearfield county was a vast unbroken wilderness, uninhabited, so far as history records, by a single white man.

The original grant of land made to William Penn by King Charles of England was divided by Penn in 1682 into three counties—Philadelphia, Chester and Bucks. No further division was made for nearly fifty years, when Lancaster county was set off from Chester. Twenty years later, 1749, York county was formed, and at intervals of a few years six more counties—Cumberland, Berks, Northampton, Bedford, Northumberland and Westmoreland were added.

Thus, at the beginning of the revolution, the Colony of Pennsylvania was sub-divided into eleven counties. With the exception of the county about Pittsburgh and Fort Duquesne, all that part of the colony lying beyond the Alleghenies was unsettled and practically unexplored. Any history of Clearfield county in the revolution, then, must necessarily be understood to relate to this territory only in the sense of its having been included, with Lycoming, Centre, Huntingdon, Luzerne and Bradford, within the bounds of Northumberland county.

Although, of course, all the able-bodied men living along the North and West Branches of the Susquehanna were engaged in the struggle for independence, no fighting occurred in that territory until the British government offered a reward to the Indians for the scalps of Americans. Then all of the Colony of Pennsylvania lying beyond the Alleghenies, became subject to raids by the savages, urged on and quietly aided by English officers and Colonists opposed to independence.

Finally conditions became so grave that troops were sent to the relief of Pittsburgh. But meanwhile the king of the Seneca Indians determined to destroy the settlement in the Wyoming valley, near where the city of Wilkes-Barre now stands. The story of the massacre which followed is one of the greatest tragedies in American history.

News of the intended raid reached the settlement in time for the women and children to be sent down the Susquehanna or into the mountains for safety and the few hundred men hastily fortified themselves at Fort-Fort. The Indians, numbering about a thousand and aided by a detachment of a Tory regiment known as the Royal Greens, reached the fort on July 3rd, 1778. The Americans fought desperately, but within a few hours not a single man was left in the fort. Those who were not killed outright were tortured to death. 227 scalps were taken, and were afterwards sold to the British at $10.00 each.

The massacre was carried on in the night, and accompanied by the most horrible cruelties. Stripped naked and forced to pass through huge fires, the prisoners were slashed by the tomahawks of the Indians, who surrounded them. A monument about half way between Wilkes-Barre and Pittston now marks the scene of these horrors. All buildings, houses, forts, blockhouses and mills were burned. The women and children made their way as best they could over the mountains or down the Susquehanna. Their story terrorized the settlers along the river and, followed by the population of Northumberland county, where raids had been made by savages on the West Branch, refugees came as far as Paxton, about half way between Sunbury and Harrisburg. Many of them were naked and all suffering from hunger and terror.

The militia gathered at Northumberland and Sunbury, and 340 men, destined for the relief of Pittsburgh, were sent instead to the Susquehanna. They proceeded to Briar Creek, Penn's Valley, and Muncy. Congress also agreed to send Colonel Thomas Hartley with an entire regiment from Philadelphia to Sunbury. Furnishing guards, Colonel Hartley induced the people of Northumberland county to return and gather their harvests.

But a few hundred soldiers could not protect a frontier that stretched across the colony from the North

Branch of the Susquehanna to the Allegheny river, and throughout the winter of 1778-9 the settlers in this region were constantly in terror of the savages. In April, 1779, about 100 British and 200 Indians made a raid on the West Branch, capturing Fort Freeland. The women and children were allowed to go to Northumberland and Sunbury. Some of Fort had to be evacuated, and even Bedford county was in danger.

Congress now ordered Washington to send a punitive expedition to the Susquehanna. Sullivan, to whom Washington gave command of the expedition, determined to wipe out the savages, completely. Building a road from Easton to Wilkes-Barre, he marched four regiments besides artillery to the latter place. In July, with three thousand men, he moved up the Susquehanna to Tioga Point, 214 boats transporting the food and supplies. There he was joined by New York troops, and together they drove the Indians from about thirty villages, which they destroyed.

Meanwhile, Colonel Broadhead, with a troop of militia, went up the Allegheny and destroyed villages of the Senecas and Muncys. These violent measures seem to have convinced the Indians, as well as the British, that further raids would be punished in like manner. No fighting is recorded after September 1779.

The revolution came to a glorious end about two years later, and pioneers began to settle in this section of the state soon after peace was declared. Clearfield county was organized in 1804, but as early as 1764 James Elkarts had surveyed along Clearfield creek, and James Whelshide was living near the present town of Luthersburg.

Many of these early settlers were men who had fought through the Revolution and the graves of several of these heroes who are buried in the cemeteries of our county have been suitably marked by our society.

And so, while Clearfield county, as such, had no part in the War for Independence, many of her sons and daughters of today are descendants of the brave men and women who lived and fought and endured thru those perilous days of our history. What finer memorial to their lives could we have than the brave chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Clearfield County? When we review the toilers and hardships they endured that these peaceful hills and valleys might be ours, the work of our organization in preserving the records of their deeds takes on a new meaning, and we are proud to prove our debt to such ancestry.

TWENTY-FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Dr. John C. Collins, the popular retiring pastor of the Eleventh Street Methodist church, and his estimable wife, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage last evening, March 25th. The large number of assembled guests being too many for the house the happy event was held in the church. It was a joyous occasion and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Dr. and Mrs. Collins were the recipients of many beautiful gifts and received the warmest congratulations on every hand. Delicious refreshments were served.

Rev. John P. McCurdy acted as Master of Ceremonies. Addresses of congratulations were made by M. M. Overly, Rev. W. W. Hartman, Rev. C. C. Snively, and Dr. Edgar Reilly. Other entertaining features of the program were the piano solo by Mrs. Chester Cowder, Reading by Mrs. G. G. Johnson, Whistling by Alex. Black, Violin Solo by Percy Fradley, and Reading by Mrs. R. I. Fulton.

We write with the many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Collins in extending warm congratulations and express it as our earnest wish that they may be spared to each other for many years and continue to be the blessing to their fellows in the future that they have been in the past. They leave next week for their new home in Curwensville, and are followed by the best wishes of their many friends.

REALLY SCIENTIFIC GAME BIRD FEEDING

Father Penn is going to give away many pounds of sunflower seeds for the benefit of the birds of the State this year. The State Game Commission, which some time ago aroused the interest of sportsmen and others who look after wild life, in the importance of planting millet, ladur corn and buckwheat to furnish a winter food supply for the birds, especially the invaluable insect eaters, has taken up the suggestion of some students of birds and secured quantities of broomcorn and sunflower seeds for planting. Many thousands of sunflowers will bloom in the State game preserves as a result of this planting, and it is the idea to set out in each of the twenty game reservations throughout the State an allotment of the 60,000 cherry, barberry, black-haw, mulberry and other berry trees to furnish a supply of food for the birds. All this planting is being done in addition to the setting out of thousands of cuttings of grapevines in the reserves and in lands nearby.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Some time ago borough council decided to purchase a new road machine. The order was placed with the Curwensville hardware company, in order to save 10 per cent. on original cost of purchase. The new machine is expected to arrive most any day now. It is what is known as a two horse machine, having a scraper attachment. The borough has a road machine, but it requires from four to six horses to handle it to make it do its work.

John Kelly is improving the outward appearance of his pool room block, removing the burned cornice work and replacing with new, clean lumber. Other improvements will be made to the building.

William Hipps who removed with his family last fall to Warren, Ohio, is now located in Johnstown, and the Progress man was informed yesterday that he contemplated returning to Curwensville at an early date.

The influenza epidemic is on the decline. Very few new cases have been reported this week, and those who have been ill are reported to be recovering nicely.

A. N. Salwick will preach at the United Christian church at Curwensville on Sunday morning.

GRAMPIAN

Harry Hepfer, who has been ill with the flu, has developed pneumonia and is very poorly at this time.

Joe Haley is quite poorly with scarlet fever at this time.

A few school mates were invited to V. P. Davis' on the 23rd, in honor of Master Laverne Davis' tenth birthday. Supper was served with ice cream and cake and a general good time was enjoyed by all.

Little Billy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Spencer, is quite poorly at this time with scarlet fever.

Walter Bonsall will assume the duties of R. F. D. carrier on R. 1 on April 1st.

The M. E. Sunday School is arranging an Easter program for their school.

Mrs. E. J. Lewis, of Pittsburgh, was called home on account of the serious illness of her father, Dr. J. Currier.

Safely stop colds as told in "Bayer" packages

To break up a cold in the head, neck, back, or any part of the body, be sure you take only "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" with the safety "Bayer Cross" on them. This is the genuine Aspirin, proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians for over eighteen years.

You must say "Bayer"—Don't ask merely for Aspirin Tablets. Then you can take them without fear, to relieve your Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Earache, Toothache, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, Neuritis, and Pains generally.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost only a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monocaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

Record for Potatoes.
 The department of agriculture says that the weight of the largest potato recorded in their office is between seven and eight pounds. There may have been larger ones produced, but the department has no record of them.

EASTER JEWELRY

The finishing touches to your Easter outfit can be found only in those little things that you expect to find in just such a store as this.

Take, for instance these few suggestions:

Pearl Beads—think of a string of these beautiful stones about your neck. We feature La Tosca Pearls as being perfect—and we can show others.

Necklaces are popular especially if they're jade. Then there are the fancy bar pins. Easter gifts of rosaries will be welcome. More pretentious gifts of wrist watches will bring pleasure. We're showing those popular "pinkie" rings.

Everything you'd expect in a jewelry store like this.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL HERE ON IMPORTANT MISSION

D. C. Stackpole, Division Engineer in charge of the State Highway Department work for the district of which Clearfield county is a part, made his first official visit to Clearfield today, coming here on business connected with the state road building work now under contract in Clearfield county.

Mr. Stackpole met the County Commissioners in an effort to get all the preliminaries incident to the prompt starting of the work on the Woodland-Blue Ball road, the Salem-Latherburg stretch and the piece in Sandy township, just outside of DuBois.

Among the difficulties discussed at the meeting, was the matter of railroad crossings and relocations on the Brady-Sandy contract, right-of-way and re-location of the Woodland-Bugler road around the Albert mill into Bigler. Mr. Stackpole is very much in favor of the proposed change in this route and started a crew of engineers this morning on the preliminary survey.

The McGee's Mills-Mahaffey road was also discussed at length. Mr. Stackpole has had considerable correspondence with the Division Superintendents of both the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads regarding the re-location of crossings and building of a retaining wall along this proposed stretch of road, and we take it from his expression on the matter that he is of the impression that the solution of this difficulty rests entirely with the public service commission and it will be necessary for the people living in that region, or better still, the Clearfield County Good Roads Association, to get busy and make the proper application to the Public Service Commission for an order requiring the relief necessary there and placing the responsibility and liabilities for making such change.

Mr. Stackpole is a Superintendent of the Pennsylvania railroad, and in his correspondence, contends that his railroad when built through that section some thirty-three years ago, made a satisfactory re-location of the township road at that time, and fails to see their liability for any part of any change now. The same is the present difficulty from the fact that the New York Central came along with their railroad some years later and digging into the bank, caused the wagon road down onto the Pennsylvania, and is really responsible for the present condition.

The New York Central then "piled the bank" and claiming that when they came to the right of way, they had no contract called for, release of all further liabilities, and there you are.

Mr. Stackpole's explanation of the situation will no doubt result in action along the lines suggested, and the matter will doubtless be taken up.

Cardinals Book Points To New Vatican-Italian Peace

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA (United Press Staff Correspondent)
ROME, March 1. (By Mail.)—A small pamphlet, issued by one of the most prominent Catholic publishing firms, signed by "Constantinus," but whose author is admitted to be no other than Cardinal Gasparri himself, has just reminded the Italian nation that, important as the Adriatic and other questions are, that of the peace with the Holy See is still of the greatest interest for the Italian people.

The fact that up to date the State Chancery of the Vatican has failed to disavow the contents of the book or deny any connection with its publication, is regarded in the political circles of the capital, as extremely significant, and seen as to justify the most sanguine expectation for an ultimate satisfactory settlement of the Roman question.

The chief and most important feature of the pamphlet is a tentative draft of a peace treaty between the Holy See and the Kingdom of Italy, which reveals the true hand of the consummate diplomat. In fact the anonymous writer says that the chief obstacle in the way for a speedy conclusion of the peace is only the opening of the negotiations. Once begun, the formulas for the solution of the most thorny problems would easily be found.

First of all, what once was the most unsmotherable of obstacles, the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope, has been quietly removed. The Vatican, in fact, renounces its territorial aspirations over the provinces that once formed the so-called Pontifical States. The writer says that what the Holy See now wishes, is only a "theoretical" recognition of its sovereignty over a fraction of territory sufficient to insure the political and religious independence of the Papacy. Hence, even the complete possession of the Vatican palaces and gardens, of which the Pope, under the guarantee law, is only a tenant by the permission of the Italian State, would be more than sufficient and fully acceptable to the Pontiff.

The first article of the tentative peace treaty reads as follows:

"The state of war between the Italian Government and the Holy See, which began at the outbreak of the hostilities on the eleventh day of September, 1870, and was suspended on the 21st of the same month, is now declared ended by both the high contracting powers.

"Article Second: The high contracting powers both regard as permanent the territorial situation resulting from the war operations except in so far as it is modified by the present treaty.

"Article Third: The Italian Government declares that the law of May 13, 1871, defining the legal status of the Pontiff constitutes a solemn and irrevocable declaration to the civilized and Catholic world on the part of the Italian Government and people guaranteeing the sovereignty and the political, civil and religious independence and liberty of the High Pontiff of the Catholic Church. Following the restoration of peace diplomatic relations between the Holy See and the Italian Government will also be resumed, and the Vatican will establish a Nunciature to His Majesty the King of Italy while the latter will appoint an ambassador to the Holy See."

Under articles six and seven the Italian Government agrees to recognize the Holy See as a great Power, and convert the yearly annuity of three million which were given to the Pontiff as an indemnity for the loss of revenues, in a fund the interests of which will be devoted to defray the expenses of Catholic missions abroad.

Articles eight, nine and ten are devoted to details and the appointment of commission for the settlement of the territorial, financial and diplomatic questions involved.

When the pamphlet is put in relation with Signor Nitti's repeated statement that he had the conciliation with the Vatican in his pocket, the hope that a final settlement of the vexed question is in sight can be regarded as more than well founded.

TESTAMENT SAVED LIFE

DOYLESTOWN, March 26. (United Press.)—A small pocket testament carried by Sergeant Harrison Thatcher on the battlefields of France, and lost when a tank in which he was riding, was blown up and he himself wounded, has been returned to Sergeant Thatcher's mother.

Sergeant Charles Carter, Camp Taylor, Ky., sent the testament to her, saying he had found it on a battlefield in Belgium. Sergeant Thatcher is a civilian life clerk of the Quarter Sessions Court.

NAVAL RECRUITING OFFICE HERE

Chief Machinist's Mate G. H. Weiss of Uncle Sam's incomparable navy, with headquarters in Altoona, is in Clearfield this week, on a preliminary cruise incident to the opening of a week's navy recruiting campaign to be put on here in the near future.

Mate Weiss has some real fancy propositions for the boy with a common school education, who desires to fit himself for a useful life at the expense of Uncle Sam.

While here Mate Weiss may be found at the Leonard House by any young man desiring to join the navy.

Poise Worth Cultivating.

Cultivate repose of manner, calmness, quietness, emotional control, if you want to grow in personal influence over your fellow men. Poise has no means constitutes the whole secret of personality. But it is an important element in it. If a choice has to be made between two leaders one well poised, the other excitable, there can be no question as to which will be chosen. Always poise, with its unconscious revelation of well controlled energy, will carry the day.

Causes of Memory's Stirring.

"How I love the smell of a wood fire," is a common exclamation. Now, there's nothing delightful about smell of wood "noise," but on the memories. The lavender sprays in cranberry's bureau drawer did much toward keeping her memory green. Returning seasons redolent with the fumes of flowers and fruit are responsible for many a homesick hour.

How to Preserve Blooms.

It is said that a bloom may be preserved in its natural color by burying it in a box of clean dry sand, where it must be left for ten days. After this treatment the flower is a thing of permanence.

Leitzinger Bros.RETURNING CLEARFIELDER GETS SAD NEWS

Thomas McGarry, a former Clearfielder, who left here in 1893, and had never been back nor had he heard from his family since that time, arrived in Clearfield yesterday from Denver, Colorado. When he stepped off the train at Market street he accosted Constable Tom Reilly and after making himself known, asked for information concerning his family. Mr. Reilly informed him that his father, his step-mother and his two half-brothers, the late Johnny and Bridget McGarry and their two sons, Dan and Jack, were all dead. Mr. McGarry left on the 11:45 B. & P. train for Luthersburg, to visit his sister, Mrs. Joseph Kirk after which he will return to Clearfield for a time to look up old friends and will then go to Shickshinny, Pa., to visit his elder brother, James McGarry, whom he has not seen since leaving Clearfield twenty-seven years ago.

WILLIS WITHERITE

Willis Witherite, son of Harvey and Sadie Witherite, died at the family home in Ferguson township on Tuesday, March 2nd, 1920, aged 17 years, 10 months and 27 days.

Willis was of a genial, kindly disposition and was loved by all who knew him for his manly bearing and thoughtfulness for others. He was a consistent member of the Baptist church, and his death is a distinct loss to his community.

He is survived by his mother, one brother, John, and his stepfather, his father preceding him to the grave a few years ago.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. W. Hatch and interment was made in Zion cemetery. A precious one from us has gone. A voice we loved is stilled. A place is vacant in our home which never can be filled.

Animals living in nature are everywhere beautiful; but it is only among men that ugliness flourishes. Savages nearly everywhere are gracious and harmonious; it is only among the civilized that harshness and discord are permitted to prevail. If the eugenic ideals that are now floating before men's eyes never lead us to any heaven at all, but merely discourage among us the generation of human creatures below the level of decent savagery, they will serve their turn.—Havelock Ellis.

Test That Proves One's Worth.

It is no great matter to associate with the good and gentle; for that is naturally pleasing to all, and every one willingly enjoyeth peace, and loveth those best that agree with him. But to be able to live peaceably with hard and perverse persons, or with the disorderly, or with such as go contrary to us, is a great grace, and a most commendable and manly thing.—Thomas a Kempis.

FOR LOVE'S SAKE

By AUGUSTUS G. SHERWIN

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)
He was a man of whims. He could afford them; but when Robert Leeds invited Inez Walters to become an inmate of his princely home he had an object outside of the inspiration of charity. He had never seen her before, and the first thing that struck him was her wild rose beauty.

Inez was living with a relative of Mr. Leeds at Acton and the Deanes awarded her an indifferent home in return for toll and drudgery. Mr. Leeds, making a flying visit, was at once attracted by the rare loveliness of the girl. His scheming brain conceived a plan whereby he could use her to his advantage.

"I have taken a fancy to the girl," he told Mrs. Deane. "She is like a radiant flower wasted in the wilderness. My life is a lonely one. I have plenty of money. I will take her off your hands, make a lady of her and, if she turns out as I think she will, I shall adopt her legally."

Inez was dazzled by the prospect set before her by the old millionaire. Within a week all her arrangements were concluded. Mrs. Deane was to fit her out with suitable attire for the occupant of a higher social sphere and Inez looked forward with natural interest and anticipation to the new life about to open up for her.

There were two things that occupied her thoughts almost exclusively that last night at the Deane home. One was, the only suitable dress she had ever worn, made for her by her mother a month before she died. It was plain and cheap, but maternal love had given it a tastefulness that endeared it fondly to the orphan girl.

The other theme was a memory of the only lover she had ever known—Waldron Pearce. He had been her "beast" for over a year. A few months previous Waldron had gone to a distant place to secure work and Inez regretted leaving Acton without seeing or bidding him good-by. With the cherished dress, however, packed in a neat box, she placed a withered bunch of roses which Waldron had given her when they had last parted.

Mr. Leeds received her with fatherly welcome and it took poor humble Inez many days to habituate herself to her luxurious environment. There was a kindly housekeeper, and the bright, pleasant manner of Inez soon made her a favorite with the other servants. Mr. Leeds provided her with everything the heart could desire and Inez tried to be grateful. Then there appeared a new figure on the scene—Ronald Greer.

He was the dissolute nephew of Mr. Leeds and a source of constant anxiety to the old man. His only living near relative, his uncle regarded him with real affection, poorly repaid by the ungrateful and undeserving object of his care. It was solely on account of Greer that he had acted on the caprice of bringing Inez into his life. In the first place, he hoped that her presence in the house would arouse the jealousy of a young lady to whom Greer had proposed marriage and who rejected him. If that failed, then Greer might turn his attention to Inez, and this Mr. Leeds hoped for, believing that marriage would curb the unsteadiness of Greer's nature.

From the beginning Inez took an aversion to the coarse, common young man who betrayed all the characteristics of a trifle. She finally entertained a suspicion of the plans of Mr. Leeds. Inactivity was foreign to her nature and she began to weary of a profitless butterfly existence. One day she ran to the door as she made out Waldron Pearce passing the door, but by the time she reached the street he was out of view.

Waldron looked pale and ill. Inez could not get him out of her mind after that. A sight of him had revived all her old-time liking for the manly, handsome young fellow. She followed an impulse to write to Mrs. Deane and ask her what had become of Waldron.

Inez received a brief reply telling her that Waldron had returned, but had left town upon hearing of his change of fortune. She gave his city address and the next day Inez located it, to find that Waldron had been taken ill and had been removed to a hospital.

"There was a young lady he loved and had followed to the city," narrated the landlady, "but he found her with such grand folks that he broke down, believing that 'he would never condescend to remember him.'"

That night Inez left the Leeds home after writing a note to its owner telling him that she should not return. She took only with her the dress her mother had made, found a respectable boarding house and employment and every evening visited the hospital. Brave, fearless little heroine that she was, her mind was all made up as to the future! And a marvelous change for the better came to the half heartbroken Waldron when he realized that true love for him had inclined Inez to give up a life of luxury to be near him.

A month later, man and wife, they settled down into a quiet, humble life, forgetting all save the fact that fate had brought together two souls meant one for the other and engrossed with a mutual happiness that poverty could not mar nor time cause to fade away.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

To see the healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning, for a week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of lime tone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a fine appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks and bowels rheumatic twinges or whose iron sallow or palid, that one year's inside bathing will have them looking and feeling better every day.

Too Deep for Him.

An Irish sailor, after plying to 50 fathoms of line, muttered to himself, "Sure, it's as long as today and tomorrow! It's a good week's work for any five men. More of it yet? The say's mighty deep, to be sure." Then he suddenly stopped short; and, looking up to the officer on watch, he explained: "Bad luck to me, sorr, if I don't believe somebody's cut off the other end of this line!"—Congregationalist.

NOTICE MEMBERS PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

On the advice of his physician Dr. Reeve has gone away on account of ill health. The services on Sunday and all of next week will be in charge of the Session. The Session is doing all in their power to help make the meeting a success. We ask the members of our church to turn in and help us. We cannot make a success of it unless the members stand back of us the same as we are standing back of Dr. Reeve. There will be no better tonic for our minister than for him to know that we are all doing all we can to make the meetings go.

Now, listen to this: On Sunday night at the usual hour there will be an old-fashioned song and prayer service, there will special music and good singing. Everybody come and bring your neighbors along. BE SURE AND BRING YOUR RED BACK SONG BOOK ALONG. It will be a great inspiration to the officers of the church if you will give us your support. Bring the children along and let them help us sing. Do not make any other arrangements for Sunday night. Come to the song service, it will do us all good.

CHEAPLY BOUGHT

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

Albion Dale was in no mood for trifling, nor even for the exercise of his usual kindly, congenial and co-operative nature. His impulse was to evade or pass by a little boy and girl who, spying him, ran eagerly in his direction. He forced a smile and tried to act quite the big brother, for the little fellow was the brother of Miss Lois Beverly, which meant worlds to Albion.

Not so much just now, however, as a week previous, for a strange and puzzling change had come over the lovely and beloved sister of little Ned. Its mystery and puzzling uncertainty enforced constant mental speculation as to the cause and possible results. While Albion, after a charming acquaintance with Lois of many months, had arrived at a point where he was about to confess his love, she seemed suddenly to become a different being. On one occasion he came upon her in tears. During two subsequent calls she was sad, pale and reticent, and arranged it so that he had no opportunity to see her alone. Then she was "not at home" one evening, and the next day he received a note from her in response to his own, cancelling a party engagement upon which there had been an agreement of mutual attendance.

So those were distressing and unsatisfactory days to the ardent lover, held at a distance and helpless to dissipate the cloud that surrounded the object of his truest affection. Albion assumed a casual smile as little Ben and a girl of his own age reached his side. The hands of each were filled with an incongruous heap of cards, envelopes and folded bits of paper.

"Oh, Mr. Dale!" piped the girl excitedly, "we're postmasters, and we're selling letters. These" extending some canceled post cards, "are a penny apiece."

"Give me five," encouraged Albion. "With the envelopes tied with ribbon, mine are three for a nickel," announced little Ben. "All except this big one. That's a real letter, and it's three cents. I found it on sister's writing desk."

"Run along to the candy store, little mail carriers," directed Albion, and thrust his unique purchases in his pocket. He thought no more of them until he had reached home. Then he drew them forth to deposit in the waste basket. He noticed his three-cent investment with a token of interest as he recalled what little Ben had said regarding it. Involuntarily, almost, he opened a folded sheet.

It was written from Yorkton and signed "Alex Tyrrell." It was very brief, addressed to Miss Lois Beverly, and read: "I shall be at room 57, Holland hotel, until Tuesday evening. I warn you that if the two hundred dollars is not produced by then, I will make the document public."

The letter was a shock to Albion. Its gross threat and familiarity stunned him. Was it possible that the documents covered some past entanglement of the woman he loved? Oh, never! never! Albion banished the thought. The writer, however, was, to say the mildest, a blackmailer. His eyes flashed. Instantaneously he decided what he would do. His should be the function to meet this Alex Tyrrell and learn his secret power, and rescue the girl he idolized from the pending menace.

That same day he reached Yorkton. It was early in the evening when Albion located the Holland hotel and room 57. He knocked at its door. It was opened by a mean-faced young man.

"This is Mr. Tyrrell?" inquired Albion.

"Well, I can take a message for him," was the guarded answer.

"I come from Miss Lois Beverly."

"That's all right," promptly replied the man. "Come in. If she sent a little necessary package, the rest is easy."

"Two hundred dollars, I believe?"

"That's the sum," answered Tyrrell.

"And I get in return?"

"The notes that are signed by Miss Beverly's brother. Of course, she has told you that they represent gambling debts, and include some signatures he had no right to simulate."

Albion took $200 from his pocket. He recalled that Wendell Beverly, the brother of Lois, had married a few months previous, and that he had formerly been somewhat reckless and dissipated.

"Those are all?" he questioned as a little package was tendered.

"Yes. See here," said Tyrrell, viewing Albion with speculative eyes. "I fancy you have a peculiar interest in the young lady. The returned notes will subdue her tears. For another hundred, though, I will tell you something that will make her very happy."

He placed himself near the door, a table between himself and his visitor as he spoke. Silently Albion produced the money mentioned.

"All right, then," grinned Tyrrell. "Her soul can rest in peace. Her brother gambled, but the notes are phony, and he never signed them."

"You sound!" cried Albion, and lifted his fist, but Tyrrell made speed in getting out of the room and beyond his reach.

"Cheaply bought! Dear, anxious fons!" murmured Albion rapidly, and left the place confident and happy.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and so quickly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. It simply dangles a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Vera Cruz.
Vera Cruz has the unique record of having been twice captured by American forces, once in 1914 when we were at war with Mexico, and again in 1917, when we were not at war with Mexico. However, all we seem to do with it after we get it is to give it back again, so its citizens probably feel little worried at the vicissitudes of war. Indeed, they have recently raised a statue in honor of the noble defenders of Vera Cruz against the gringos, which shows that they feel they are adequately protected.

Look to Future Food Supply.
Owing to the shortage of imported foodstuffs, the production of foodstuffs locally is being encouraged by the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay States. Even some of the rubber plantations have been compelled to utilize portions of their acreage for food products. This stimulation of agriculture has created interest in mechanical means to increase production, and a shipment of tractors made recently sold readily.

Sun's Immensity.
The sun, which is by no means a large star, as stars go, could easily contain within its boundaries the entire earth and moon and the distance between them. Says the Scientific American, in fact, three systems like that consisting of earth and moon could be strung out in a row through the center of the sun, without coming within 50,000 miles of his surface on either side.

Benefit in Joy Giving.
When you once get started in joy giving it's easy to keep it up. The fact that you give joy brings candidates for your magic touch constantly before you. The returning benefits of having given joy keep you supplied with the means of joy giving. So you just direct the ever enlarging stream that through you ministers to your fellows. And your own joy increases with each new expression of your good will. The joy giving habit grows upon you and you would be perfectly miserable without the chance of helping others to happier days. It's real joy.—Grit.

Proper Food.

There is no end to the discussion of the influence of dietetics on the health. In that discussion we find much said about calories, proteins, and food values generally. In the meantime the people seem to be eating what they want, mindless of calories or proteins. The scientific facts concerning food have no more effect upon people than on the woman in the Chicago settlement, who refused some healthful sandwich and stew, saying she would eat what "she'd rather." It is almost impossible to hold people down to scientific dietetics. Take calories, for instance, the ruling element in food, but which sometimes are not as loudly called for as at other times and by other appetites, but no one thinks of calories. One takes the food that suits his palate, without any reference to the chemistry of it. But the food problem that does not include the habit problem is not to be commended. Good habits and good food go together. A person of bad habits wants bad food. A person of good life wants his air pure, his talk pure, his food pure. As a man thinks in his stomach so is he, also.—Ohio State Journal.

Pays to Be Straight.

There's a satisfaction in living up to your obligations. Only the man who consistently meets his bills can look the world in the face without either feeling shame or acting the lie. It makes a fellow step with a finer tread when he knows that he has done his best and that no one can call him a slacker or point toward him the finger of scorn. Sometimes he may feel burdened by this constant living up to ideals when others don't, but the load will soon become one of satisfaction as conscience declares approval. You can't do better than live up to your sense of obligation.—Grit.

Learning.

Learning taketh away the wildness and barbarism and fierceness of men's minds, though a little superficial learning doth rather work a contrary effect. It taketh away all levity, temerity, and insolency by copious suggestions of all doubts and difficulties, and acquainting the mind to balance reasons on both sides, and to turn back the first offers and conceits of the kind, and to accept nothing but the examined and tried.—Bacon.

Accuracy Better Than Speed.

People who go in for speed records are not as wise as they think they are, for speed without accuracy is of no avail. True, time is at a premium in every line these days and we should not under any circumstances waste a minute unnecessarily. But if we aren't sure about any phase of our work, we must take sufficient time to go into it and not rely on chance to help us where we can possibly help ourselves.

Not in Bull's Class.

Peter was out exercising his bulldog when a small white poodle ran up to the gate and began barking through the cracks of the gate at Peter's bulldog, which made him growl and raise his bristles as if he would chew the poodle up. Peter said to his dog: "Drop your bristles, Bull; nothing doing with such a little dog like that."

Clearfield County Is 116 Years Old Today

Interesting Bit of Early History Contributed By J. Frank Snyder, Esq., of Clearfield, Pa.

COUNTY ERECTED MARCH 26, 1804

CLEARFIELD COUNTY 116 YEARS OLD

(By J. FRANK SNYDER.)

"Clearfield County, named from the stream, Clearfield Creek, running through the county, into a western branch of the Susquehanna" was erected March 26, 1804, out of parts of Huntingdon and Lycoming counties. Clearfield county, therefore, today celebrates her 116th anniversary. There is not a single person living today who resided here at the time the county was erected. Mrs. Anna Gulich Halsey born May 5, 1816, in Lawrence township, is still with us and, so far as is known, is the first person born in the county to pass the century mark.

On August 8, 1804, the court, by its order, created an election district which embraced the entire county, under the name of Chincelamoux township. By the year 1818, this township had disappeared from the map and in its stead there were six new townships, namely: Beccaria, Bradford, Covington, Gibson, Lawrence and Pike. A part of Gibson was afterwards taken in the erection of Elk; a portion of the territory within the original limits of the county was added to Jefferson. Today we have one city; 19 boroughs; 30 townships; the "District of Pine," divided into 96 election districts.

In 1818 a writer in the course of his "Description," in speaking of its towns said:

"Clearfield town, which is intended for the seat of justice contains in addition to a brick court house not quite finished, 5 dwelling houses. The West branch of the Susquehanna washes the west part of the town and forms its front—

"Curwensville has 4 houses.

"Karthaus has 4 houses. Near this village (which is of very recent date) iron works have been erected and other important improvements are progressing fostered by the care of the industrious and spirited proprietor." Mr. Burrows in his "State Book of Pennsylvania," says that "At Karthaus so called from the name of the original proprietor, the first successful attempt was made in Pennsylvania to smelt iron by means of bituminous coal."

By the provisions of the act erecting the county it was attached to Centre for judicial purposes. The act of January 29, 1822, directed "That upon the third Monday of October next and thereafter, the courts shall be opened and held at the court house, now erected in Clearfield town." The courts were held as directed and from and after that date the county was organized for all purposes.

Soon after the complete organization of the county, in 1822, a deep interest was awakened in educational matters and being of so great concern to the settlers is entitled to mention in almost every article on the development of the county. The pioneers here constructed the mandate of the Constitution of 1790 enjoining "the establishment of schools throughout the State in such manner that the poor may be taught gratis" to mean that central schools or academies should be established in each county. They accordingly secured the passage of an act entitled "An Act establishing an Academy in the town of Clearfield." The old Academy was erected and schools opened in it in the fall of 1830. During the period of its existence as an academic institution (1830-1874) it was noted as a school for the higher education of both sexes, and exercised an influence for good throughout the entire county. A glance at the courses of instruction will give some idea of the high character of that institution, and of the foundation it laid for good citizenship. The "Course of Instruction," according to the "Catalogue" for 1854-5 embraced the branches following:

KENTUCKY LAD KIDNAPPED IS LOCATED

Two Year Old Paul Little Out-

LOCKED UP SINCE WEDNESDAY

LEXINGTON, March 26.—Paul, Little, 12 year old son of E. R. Little, wealthy oil man, who was kidnapped from the Federal building here last Wednesday, was found by his mother in a room in the Phoenix Hotel here early today. The boy was unharmed. He himself made a telephone call which resulted in his rescue. The kidnappers escaped. One of the two men who was with the boy, had just left him and escaped down one elevator as the mother and a number of friends came up in another elevator. The package containing $25,000, placed by the father in a garbage can in an alley in the heart of Lexington, was untouched.

The child's parents had resigned themselves to wait for some communication from the abductors. The Little telephone rang early today and Mrs. Little answered. "This is Paul. I am in the Phoenix Hotel," he said. The mother did not wait for details. With her other son she dashed out of the house, followed by her husband. They hailed an automobile and rushed to the hotel. "Is my boy here?" she cried as she entered the lobby. No one had seen the child. Inquiry at the telephone switchboard showed a message had been sent from room 651. A number of friends had gathered in the lobby and the party started for room 651 on one of the elevators. As the party reached the sixth floor another elevator started down. A lone man occupied the car. He was believed to be one of the abductors. Room 651 was locked, but the door was opened with difficulty and Paul rushed into his mother's arms. The boy said he had been held in the room ever since he was taken in the Post office Wednesday. A large part of the time he was locked in the bath room.

HOT CAKES FROM CLEARFIELD GO. THE NEWS PAN FOLKS PREPARED QUICKLY SERVED FOR 1920 CENSUS

OUR TROOPS NOT IN ZONE OF STRIFE

WASHINGTON, March 26.—President Wilson will inform Congress in response to the Kahn resolution that the troops on the Rhine will not participate in any advance in Germany to quell internal strife it was believed today. The Kahn resolution called on the President to inform Congress the exact status of the American troops in Germany. Wilson is expected to point out that the American troops are in the Rhine district in accordance with the terms of the armistice.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE FACES CRISIS

DOVER, Del., March 26.—Opponents of the federal woman's suffrage amendment in the Delaware legislature planned to call up the ratification measure for a vote today. If the measure is called up today suffragists fear their case would be lost here. They hoped to postpone the vote several days to try to win over several additional votes for the measure.

ORDER BEING RESTORED IN GERMANY

BERLIN, March 25.—Night—Government advisers here today indicated continued success of their efforts to restore order throughout Germany. The situation in the Rhine provinces is quieting, officials said. They affirm early reports that the government has completed an agreement with at least a majority of the insurgent workers' group.

COAL SCALE MEETING MONDAY AT NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 26.—The general scale committee of the bituminous coal miners and a similar committee of the operators will meet here Monday to consider the new wage agreement according to announcement by Philip Murray, International Vice President of the United Mine Workers of America.

ANTI LEAGUE PARTY LOOMS

WASHINGTON, March 26.—"An anti-League of Nations party" is being considered, it was learned today. The plan is to have its own candidate unless one of the old party goes on record as being irreconcilably opposed to the provisions of the covenant. The men backing the new movement have been trying for weeks to get Senator Borah from Idaho to allow himself to be named their candidate. Borah has refused. "I am not a candidate for the presidency and will not be so long as Senator Johnson runs for the Republican nomination," Borah said today. It was the only comment he would make on the Anti-League party idea.

WOULD TAX STOCK DIVIDENDS

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, today introduced a resolution providing for an amendment to the constitution making stock dividends taxable.

SILENCE OF WILSON HINDERS DEMOCRATS

WASHINGTON, March 26.—House Democrats are rebelling against the continued silence of President Wilson on the question of a third term. Dissatisfaction apparently is rampant among the Democrats because while the Republican candidates are conducting lively booms Democratic campaign planners are in a state of uncertainty due to the fact that no word has been sent by the party to the White House. Although President Wilson's health might not permit of a campaign necessary for the seeking of a third term it is believed by some Congressmen that he might ask renomination on the ground that it is necessary to have the peace treaty. House leaders have started a campaign to force the President's hand. This action was started when Representative Humphreys of Mississippi, introduced a resolution with the approval of virtually all Demo-

3032 "Little Bunches of Sunshine" Arrived During 1819 via Dr. Stork To Boost Total

THREE BIRTHS TO ONE DEATH

Clearfield county people were not unmindful of the fact that Uncle Sam had arranged for his "every ten year count of noses" to take place at the beginning of the year 1920, and no doubt from a spirit of county pride in numbers and for sundry other good and sufficient reasons managed to provide themselves during the twelve months last past with a sum total of 3032 babies.

In other words and "to get down to cases," as it were, there was nothing slow about Clearfield county people and even though the per centage of births was higher in the earlier history of the county, last year's harvest of "little bunches of sunshine" was not so worse, and goes to show that "race suicide" does not have much of a hold in many sections of Clearfield county. You can judge of all affected sections from the following list of births and deaths for the different districts for 1919. It shows that approximately one out of every three couples in the county entertained old Dr. Stork during the year.

During the same twelve months 1315 deaths occurred or about one out of each hundred Clearfield county residents died during the year, which is also a healthy showing. The different districts with each Registrar of Vital Statistics together with the births and deaths for each district follow:

Clearfield County In The Revolution

(This paper was prepared and read by Miss Mary Swoope, of Curwensville, at a recent meeting of the local D. A. R. chapter.)

During the years of the struggle of the American Colonies for independence the territory now known as Clearfield county was a vast unbroken wilderness, uninhabited, so far as history records, by a single white man.

The original grant of land made to William Penn by King Charles of England was divided by Penn in 1682 into three counties—Philadelphia, Chester and Bucks. No further division was made for nearly fifty years, when Lancaster county was set off from Chester. Twenty years later, 1749, York county was formed, and at intervals of a few years six more counties—Cumberland, Berks, Northampton, Bedford, Northumberland and Westmoreland were added.

Thus, at the beginning of the revolution, the Colony of Pennsylvania was sub-divided into eleven counties. With the exception of the county about Pittsburgh and Fort Duquesne, all that part of the colony lying beyond the Alleghenies was unsettled and practically unexplored. Any history of Clearfield county in the revolution, then, must necessarily be understood to relate to this territory only in the sense of its having been included, with Lycoming, Centre, Huntingdon, Luzerne and Bradford, within the bounds of Northumberland county.

Although, of course, all the able-bodied men living along the North and West Branches of the Susquehanna were engaged in the struggle for independence, no fighting occurred in that territory until the British government offered a reward to the Indians for the scalps of Americans. Then all of the Colony of Pennsylvania lying beyond the Alleghenies, became subject to raids by the savages, urged on and quietly aided by English officers and Colonists opposed to independence.

Finally conditions became so grave that troops were sent to the relief of Pittsburgh. But meanwhile the king of the Seneca Indians determined to destroy the settlement in the Wyoming valley, near where the city of Wilkes-Barre now stands. The story of the massacre which followed is one of the greatest tragedies in American history.

News of the intended raid reached the settlement in time for the women and children to be sent down the Susquehanna or into the mountains for safety and the few hundred men hastily fortified themselves at Fort-Fort. The Indians, numbering about a thousand and aided by a detachment of a Tory regiment known as the Royal Greens, reached the fort on July 3rd, 1778. The Americans fought desperately, but within a few hours not a single man was left in the fort. Those who were not killed outright were tortured to death. 227 scalps were taken, and were afterwards sold to the British at $10.00 each.

The massacre was carried on in the night, and accompanied by the most horrible cruelties. Stripped naked and forced to pass through huge fires, the prisoners were slashed by the tomahawks of the Indians, who surrounded them. A monument about half way between Wilkes-Barre and Pittston now marks the scene of these horrors. All buildings, houses, forts, blockhouses and mills were burned. The women and children made their way as best they could over the mountains or down the Susquehanna. Their story terrorized the settlers along the river and, followed by the population of Northumberland county, where raids had been made by savages on the West Branch, refugees came as far as Paxton, about half way between Sunbury and Harrisburg. Many of them were naked and all suffering from hunger and terror.

The militia gathered at Northumberland and Sunbury, and 340 men, destined for the relief of Pittsburgh, were sent instead to the Susquehanna. They proceeded to Briar Creek, Penn's Valley, and Muncy. Congress also agreed to send Colonel Thomas Hartley with an entire regiment from Philadelphia to Sunbury. Furnishing guards, Colonel Hartley induced the people of Northumberland county to return and gather their harvests.

But a few hundred soldiers could not protect a frontier that stretched across the colony from the North

Branch of the Susquehanna to the Allegheny river, and throughout the winter of 1778-9 the settlers in this region were constantly in terror of the savages. In April, 1779, about 100 British and 200 Indians made a raid on the West Branch, capturing Fort Freeland. The women and children were allowed to go to Northumberland and Sunbury. Some of Fort had to be evacuated, and even Bedford county was in danger.

Congress now ordered Washington to send a punitive expedition to the Susquehanna. Sullivan, to whom Washington gave command of the expedition, determined to wipe out the savages, completely. Building a road

TWENTY-FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Dr. John C. Collins, the popular retiring pastor of the Eleventh Street Methodist church, and his estimable wife, celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage last evening, March 25th. The large number of assembled guests being too many for the house the happy event was held in the church. It was a joyous occasion and was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Dr. and Mrs. Collins were the recipients of many beautiful gifts and received the warmest congratulations on every hand. Delicious refreshments were served.

Rev. John P. McCurdy acted as Master of Ceremonies. Addresses of congratulations were made by M. M. Overly, Rev. W. W. Hartman, Rev. C. C. Snively, and Dr. Edgar Reilly. Other entertaining features of the program were the piano solo by Mrs. Chester Cowder, Reading by Mrs. G. G. Johnson, Whistling by Alex Black, Violin Solo by Percy Fradley, and Reading by Mrs. R. I. Fulton.

We write with the many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Collins in extending warm congratulations and express it as our earnest wish that they may be spared to each other for many years and continue to be the blessing to their fellows in the future that they have been in the past. They leave next week for their new home in Curwensville, and are followed by the best wishes of their many friends.

REALLY SCIENTIFIC GAME BIRD FEEDING

Father Penn is going to give away many pounds of sunflower seeds for the benefit of the birds of the State this year. The State Game Commission, which some time ago aroused the interest of sportsmen and others who look after wild life, in the importance of planting millet, kaffir corn and buckwheat to furnish a winter food supply for the birds, especially the invaluable insect eaters, has taken up the suggestion of some students of birds and secured quantities of broomcorn and sunflower seeds for planting. Many thousands of sunflowers will bloom in the State game preserves as a result of this planting, and it is the idea to set out in each of the twenty game reservations throughout the State an allotment of the 60,000 cherry, barberry, black-haw, mulberry and other berry trees to furnish a supply of food for the birds. All this planting is being done in addition to the setting out of thousands of cuttings of grapevines in the reserves and in lands nearby.

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS CURWENSVILLE

Some time ago borough council decided to purchase a new road machine. The order was placed with the Curwensville hardware company, in order to save 10 per cent. on original cost of purchase. The new machine is expected to arrive most any day now. It is what is known as a two horse machine, having a scraper attachment. The borough has a road machine, but it requires from four to six horses to handle it to make it do its work.

John Kelly is improving the outward appearance of his pool room block, removing the burned cornice work and replacing with new, clean lumber. Other improvements will be made to the building.

William Hipps who removed with his family last fall to Warren, Ohio, is now located in Johnstown, and the Progress man was informed yesterday that he contemplated returning to Curwensville at an early date.

The influenza epidemic is on the decline. Very few new cases have been reported this week, and those who have been ill are reported to be recovering nicely.

A. N. Salwick will preach at the United Christian church at Curwensville on Sunday morning.

GRAMPIAN

Harry Hepfer, who has been ill with the flu, has developed pneumonia and is very poorly at this time.

Joe Haley is quite poorly with scarlet fever at this time.

A few school mates were invited to V. P. Davis' on the 23rd, in honor of Master Laverne Davis' tenth birthday. Supper was served with ice cream and cake and a general good time was enjoyed by all.

Little Billy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Spencer, is quite poorly at this time with scarlet fever.

Walter Bonsall will assume the duties of R. F. D. carrier on R. 1 on April 1st.

The M. E. Sunday School is arranging an Easter program for their school.

Mrs. E. J. Lewis, of Pittsburgh, was called home on account of the serious illness of her father, Dr. J. Currier.

EASTER JEWELRY

The finishing touches to your Easter outfit can be found only in those little things that you expect to find in just such a store as this.

Take, for instance these few suggestions:

Pearl Beads—think of a string of these beautiful stones about your neck. We feature La Tosca Pearls as being perfect—and we can show others.

Necklaces are popular especially if they're jade. Then there are the fancy bar pins. Easter gifts of rosaries will be welcome. More pretentious gifts of wrist watches will bring pleasure. We're showing those popular "pinkie" rings.

Everything you'd expect in a jewelry store like this.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT OFFICIAL HERE ON IMPORTANT MISSION

D. C. Stackpole, Division Engineer in charge of the State Highway Department work for the district of which Clearfield county is a part, made his first official visit to Clearfield today, coming here on business connected with the state road building work now under contract in Clearfield county.

Mr. Stackpole met the County Commissioners in an effort to get all the preliminaries incident to the prompt starting of the work on the Woodland-Blue Ball road, the Salem-Latherburg stretch and the piece in Sandy township, just outside of DuBois.

Among the difficulties discussed at the meeting, was the matter of railroad crossings and relocations on the Brady-Sandy contract, right-of-way and re-location of the Woodland-Bigler road around the Albert mill into Bigler. Mr. Stackpole is very much in favor of the proposed change in this route and started a crew of engineers this morning on the preliminary survey.

The McGee's Mills-Mahaffey road was also discussed at length. Mr. Stackpole has had considerable correspondence with the Division Superintendents of both the Pennsylvania and New York Central railroads regarding the re-location of crossings and building of a retaining wall along this proposed stretch of road, and we take it from his expression on the matter that he is of the impression that the solution of this difficulty rests entirely with the public service commission and it will be necessary for the people living in that region, or better still, the Clearfield County Good Roads Association, to get busy and make the proper application to the Public Service Commission for an order requiring the relief necessary there and placing the responsibility and liabilities for making such change.

Mr. Stackpole is a Superintendent of the Pennsylvania railroad, and in his correspondence, contends that his railroad when built through that section some thirty-three years ago, made a satisfactory re-location of the township road at that time, and fails to see their liability for any part of any change now. He claims the present difficulty from the fact that the New York Central came along with their railroad some years later and digging into the bank, caused the wagon road down onto the Pennsylvania, and is really responsible for the present condition.

The New York Central then "piled the back" and is claiming that when they came to the right of way, they had no contract called for, release of all further liabilities, and there you are.

Mr. Stackpole's explanation of the situation will no doubt result in action along the lines suggested, and the matter will doubtless be taken up.

at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Clearfield County Good Roads Association to be held in Clearfield March 26th.

Clearfielders who met the new Division Superintendent for the first time, was impressed by his earnestness and the close grasp he has on the road problems of Clearfield county. He appears to be entirely conversant with every phase of the situation and informed the Progress man, who met him in the Commissioner's office in company with County Superintendent Westcott, that in Highway Department parlance Clearfield is styled one of the "mud counties" of the state and they propose to help pull us out of the mud. The Department has begun this arduous task by having no less than thirty miles of road for Clearfield county for the coming year, that of course including the 16 miles already under contract.

WESTCOTT BUSY WITH ROAD DRAGS

County Superintendent of Roads Edgar Westcott had his entire county road crew at work yesterday and dragged the entire route from Osceola to DuBois. In addition to the many drags in use two road machines were utilized in combing the spring ruts out of the roads.

The main road through Clearfield county is now in excellent shape considering the season of the year.

Superintendent Westcott is very much pleased over the manner in which the road through the notorious Draucker's Woods stood up through the recent severe winter. Last year the sinkhole in the centre of this stretch was given an overhauling and an under drain modeled after the plan in use on the military roads of France was constructed. It appears to have been the long-sought solution of the difficulty and thanks thereto the tourists' greatest nightmare between Clearfield and DuBois is a thing of the past.

NO SIZE LIMIT ON TROUT THIS SEASON

Attention is being called to the fact that there is no size limit on trout caught during the coming fishing season. The law formerly required that all trout under six inches should be thrown back into the stream, but the last session of the state legislature amended that section of the law. While it is not required that the small ones be thrown back, fishermen are recommending that when they are not badly injured as to make it appear doubtful whether they would live, that they be placed again in the stream.

Gentleman.
The original form of the word "gentleman" was Gentleman—signifying a convert to Christianity.

Cardinals Book Points To New Vatican-Italian Peace

By CAMILLO CIANFARRA (United Press Staff Correspondent)

ROME, March 1. (By Mail.)—A small pamphlet, issued by one of the most prominent Catholic publishing firms, signed by "Constantinus," but whose author is admitted to be no other than Cardinal Gasparri himself, has just reminded the Italian nation that, important as the Adriatic and other questions are, that of the peace with the Holy See is still of the greatest interest for the Italian people.

The fact that up to date the State Chancery of the Vatican has failed to disavow the contents of the book or deny any connection with its publication, is regarded in the political circles of the capital, as extremely significant, and seen as to justify the most sanguine expectation for an ultimate satisfactory settlement of the Roman question.

The chief and most important feature of the pamphlet is a tentative draft of a peace treaty between the Holy See and the Kingdom of Italy, which reveals the true hand of the consummate diplomat. In fact the anonymous writer says that the chief obstacle in the way for a speedy conclusion of the peace is only the opening of the negotiations. Once begun, the formulas for the solution of the most thorny problems would easily be found.

First of all, what once was the most unsmotherable of obstacles, the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope, has been quietly removed. The Vatican, in fact, renounces its territorial aspirations over the provinces that once formed the so-called Pontifical States. The writer says that what the Holy See now wishes, is only a "theoretical" recognition of its sovereignty over a fraction of territory sufficient to insure the political and religious independence of the Papacy. Hence, even the complete possession of the Vatican palaces and gardens, of which the Pope, under the guarantee law, is only a tenant by the permission of the Italian State, would be more than sufficient and fully acceptable to the Pontiff.

The first article of the tentative peace treaty reads as follows:

"The state of war between the Italian Government and the Holy See, which began at the outbreak of the hostilities on the eleventh day of September, 1870, and was suspended on the 21st of the same month, is now declared ended by both the high contracting powers.

"Article Second: The high contracting powers both regard as permanent the territorial situation resulting from the war operations except in so far it is modified by the present treaty.

"Article Third: The Italian Government declares that the law of May 13, 1871, defining the legal status of the Pontiff constitutes a solemn and irrevocable declaration to the civilized and Catholic world on the part of the Italian Government and people guaranteeing the sovereignty and the political, civil and religious independence and liberty of the High Pontiff of the Catholic Church. Following the restoration of peace diplomatic relations between the Holy See and the Italian Government will also be resumed, and the Vatican will establish a Nunciature to His Majesty the King of Italy while the latter will appoint an ambassador to the Holy See."

Under articles six and seven the Italian Government agrees to recognize the Holy See as a great Power, and convert the yearly annuity of three million which were given to the Pontiff as an indemnity for the loss of revenues, in a fund the interests of which will be devoted to defray the expenses of Catholic missions abroad.

Articles eight, nine and ten are devoted to details and the appointment of commission for the settlement of the territorial, financial and diplomatic questions involved.

When the pamphlet is put in relation with Signor Nitti's repeated statement that he had the conciliation with the Vatican in his pocket, the hope that a final settlement of the vexed question is in sight can be regarded as more than well founded.

TESTAMENT SAVED LIFE

DOYLESTOWN, March 26. (United Press.)—A small pocket testament carried by Sergeant Harrison Thatcher on the battlefields of France, and lost when a tank in which he was riding, was blown up and he himself wounded, has been returned to Sergeant Thatcher's mother.

Sergeant Charles Carter, Camp Taylor, Ky., sent the testament to her, saying he had found it on a battlefield in Belgium. Sergeant Thatcher is a civilian life clerk of the Quarter Sessions Court.

NAVAL RECRUITING OFFICE HERE

Chief Machinist's Mate G. H. Weiss of Uncle Sam's incomparable navy, with headquarters in Altoona, is in Clearfield this week, on a preliminary cruise incident to the opening of a week's navy recruiting campaign to be put on here in the near future.

Mate Weiss has some real fancy propositions for the boy with a common school education, who desires to fit himself for a useful life at the expense of Uncle Sam.

While here Mate Weiss may be found at the Leonard House by any young man desiring to join the navy.

Poise Worth Cultivating.

Cultivate repose of manner, calmness, quietness, emotional control, if you want to grow in personal influence over your fellow men. Poise has no means constitutes the whole secret of personality. But it is an important element in it. If a choice has to be made between two leaders one well poised, the other excitable, there can be no question as to which will be chosen. Always poise, with its unconscious revelation of well controlled energy, will carry the day.

Causes of Memory's Stirring.

"How I love the smell of a wood fire," is a common exclamation. Now, there's nothing delightful about smell of wood "noise," but on the memories. The lavender sprays in cranberry's bureau drawer did much toward keeping her memory green. Returning seasons redolent with the fumes of flowers and fruit are responsible for many a homesick hour.

How to Preserve Blooms.

It is said that a bloom may be preserved in its natural color by burying it in a box of clean dry sand, where it must be left for ten days. After this treatment the flower is a thing of permanence.

Leitzinger Bros.RETURNING CLEARFIELDER GETS SAD NEWS

Thomas McGarry, a former Clearfielder, who left here in 1893, and had never been back nor had he heard from his family since that time, arrived in Clearfield yesterday from Denver, Colorado. When he stepped off the train at Market street he accosted Constable Tom Reilly and after making himself known, asked for information concerning his family. Mr. Reilly informed him that his father, his step-mother and his two half-brothers, the late Johnny and Bridget McGarry and their two sons, Dan and Jack, were all dead. Mr. McGarry left on the 11:45 B. & P. train for Luthersburg, to visit his sister, Mrs. Joseph Kirk after which he will return to Clearfield for a time to look up old friends and will then go to Shickshinny, Pa., to visit his elder brother, James McGarry, whom he has not seen since leaving Clearfield twenty-seven years ago.

WILLIS WITHERITE

Willis Witherite, son of Harvey and Sadie Witherite, died at the family home in Ferguson township on Tuesday, March 2nd, 1920, aged 17 years, 10 months and 27 days.

Willis was of a genial, kindly disposition and was loved by all who knew him for his manly bearing and thoughtfulness for others. He was a consistent member of the Baptist church, and his death is a distinct loss to his community.

He is survived by his mother, one brother, John, and his stepfather, his father preceding him to the grave a few years ago.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. G. W. Hatch and interment was made in Zion cemetery. A precious one from us has gone. A voice we loved is stilled. A place is vacant in our home which never can be filled.

CURWENSVILLE GIRL TO VISIT EUROPE

Miss Grace Garner, one of Curwensville's well known and highly esteemed young ladies will sail for Europe about May 15th with a party of friends and relatives from Denver, Colorado, Dover, New Hampshire and Philadelphia. They will visit England, the battlefields of France and Flanders and also look upon the beauties of Switzerland and Italy.

ROBERTS WON BOUT

The wrestling bout at the Liberty Theatre last evening, between Kellar, of Sunbury, and Roberts, of Boardman, was won by the Knox township champion, who scored two out of three falls.

A special train brought about one hundred sport fans from Boardman to see the bout.

Animals living in nature are everywhere beautiful; but it is only among men that ugliness flourishes. Savages nearly everywhere are gracious and harmonious; it is only among the civilized that harshness and discord are permitted to prevail. If the eugenic ideals that are now floating before men's eyes never lead us to any heaven at all, but merely discourage among us the generation of human creatures below the level of decent savagery, they will serve their turn.—Havelock Ellis.

Test That Proves One's Worth.

It is no great matter to associate with the good and gentle; for that is naturally pleasing to all, and every one willingly enjoyeth peace, and loveth those best that agree with him. But to be able to live peaceably with hard and perverse persons, or with the disorderly, or with such as go contrary to us, is a great grace, and a most commendable and manly thing.—Thomas a Kempis.

FOR LOVE'S SAKE

By AUGUSTUS G. SHERWIN

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

He was a man of whims. He could afford them; but when Robert Leeds invited Inez Walters to become an inmate of his princely home he had an object outside of the inspiration of charity. He had never seen her before, and the first thing that struck him was her wild rose beauty.

Inez was living with a relative of Mr. Leeds at Acton and the Deanes awarded her an indifferent home in return for toll and drudgery. Mr. Leeds, making a flying visit, was at once attracted by the rare loveliness of the girl. His scheming brain conceived a plan whereby he could use her to his advantage.

"I have taken a fancy to the girl," he told Mrs. Deane. "She is like a radiant flower wasted in the wilderness. My life is a lonely one. I have plenty of money. I will take her off your hands, make a lady of her and, if she turns out as I think she will, I shall adopt her legally."

Inez was dazzled by the prospect set before her by the old millionaire. Within a week all her arrangements were concluded. Mrs. Deane was to fit her out with suitable attire for the occupant of a higher social sphere and Inez looked forward with natural interest and anticipation to the new life about to open up for her.

There were two things that occupied her thoughts almost exclusively that last night at the Deane home. One was, the only suitable dress she had ever worn, made for her by her mother a month before she died. It was plain and cheap, but maternal love had given it a tastefulness that endeared it fondly to the orphan girl.

The other theme was a memory of the only lover she had ever known—Waldron Pearce. He had been her "beast" for over a year. A few months previous Waldron had gone to a distant place to secure work and Inez regretted leaving Acton without seeing or bidding him good-by. With the cherished dress, however, packed in a neat box, she placed a withered bunch of roses which Waldron had given her when they had last parted.

Mr. Leeds received her with fatherly welcome and it took poor humble Inez many days to habituate herself to her luxurious environment. There was a kindly housekeeper, and the bright, pleasant manner of Inez soon made her a favorite with the other servants. Mr. Leeds provided her with everything the heart could desire and Inez tried to be grateful. Then there appeared a new figure on the scene—Ronald Greer.

He was the dissolute nephew of Mr. Leeds and a source of constant anxiety to the old man. His only living near relative, his uncle regarded him with real affection, poorly repaid by the ungrateful and undeserving object of his care. It was solely on account of Greer that he had acted on the caprice of bringing Inez into his life. In the first place, he hoped that her presence in the house would arouse the jealousy of a young lady to whom Greer had proposed marriage and who rejected him. If that failed, then Greer might turn his attention to Inez, and this Mr. Leeds hoped for, believing that marriage would curb the unsteadiness of Greer's nature.

From the beginning Inez took an aversion to the coarse, common young man who betrayed all the characteristics of a trifter. She finally entertained a suspicion of the plans of Mr. Leeds. Inactivity was foreign to her nature and she began to weary of a profitless butterfly existence. One day she ran to the door as she made out Waldron Pearce passing the door, but by the time she reached the street he was out of view.

Waldron looked pale and ill. Inez could not get him out of her mind after that. A sight of him had revived all her old-time liking for the manly, handsome young fellow. She followed an impulse to write to Mrs. Deane and ask her what had become of Waldron.

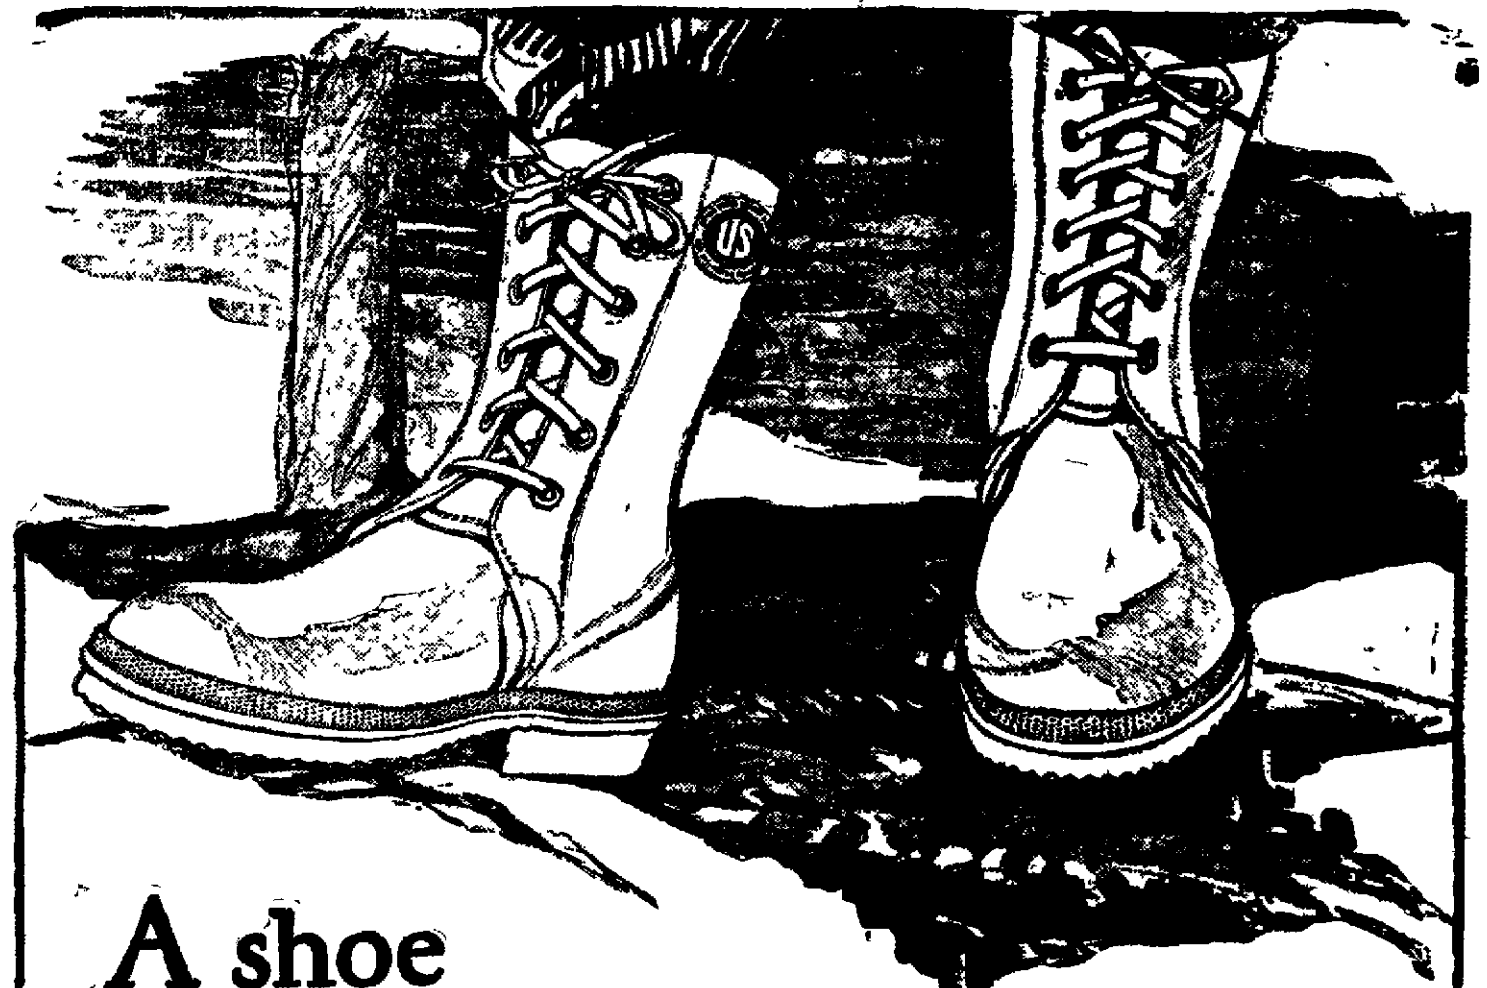

Inez received a brief reply telling her that Waldron had returned, but had left town upon hearing of her change of fortune. She gave his city address and the next day Inez located it, to find that Waldron had been taken ill and had been removed to a hospital.

"There was a young lady he loved and had followed to the city," narrated the landlady, "but he found her with such grand folks that he broke down, believing that 'he would never condescend to remember him.'"

That night Inez left the Leeds home after writing a note to its owner telling him that she should not return. She took only with her the dress her mother had made, found a respectable boarding house and employment and every evening visited the hospital. Brave, fearless little heroine that she was, her mind was all made up as to the future! And a marvelous change for the better came to the half heartbroken Waldron when he realized that true love for him had inclined Inez to give up a life of luxury to be near him.

A month later, man and wife, they settled down into a quiet, humble life, forgetting all save the fact that fate had brought together two souls meant one for the other and engrossed with a mutual happiness that poverty could not mar nor time cause to fade away.

Jump from Bed in Morning and Drink Hot Water

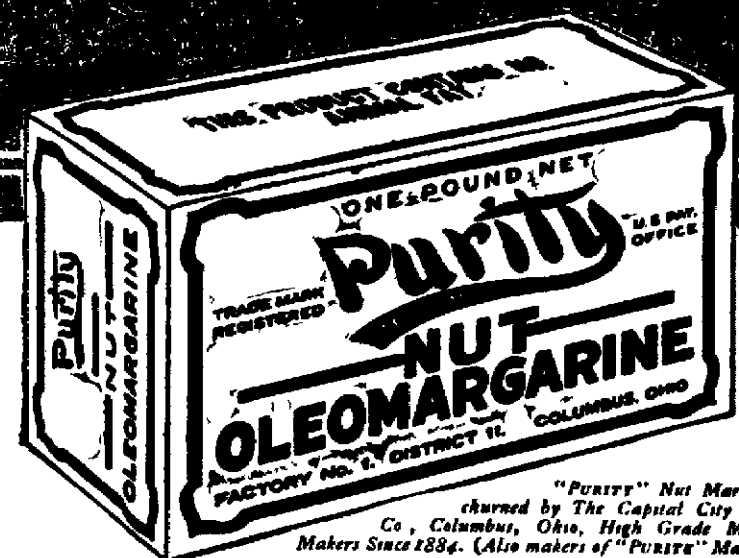

Tells why everyone should drink hot water each morning before breakfast.

To see the healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning, for a week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of lime tone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a fine appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks and bowels rheumatic twinges or whose complexion is sallow or pallid, that one year's inside bathing will have them looking and feeling better every day.

Too Deep for Him.
An Irish sailor, after putting in 50 fathoms of line, muttered to himself, "Sure, it's as long as today and tomorrow! It's a good week's work for any five men. More of it yet? The say's mighty deep, to be sure." Then he suddenly stopped short; and, looking up to the officer on watch, he explained: "Bad luck to me, sorr, if I don't believe somebody's cut off the other end of this line!"—Congregationalist.

NOTICE MEMBERS PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

On the advice of his physician Dr. Reeve has gone away on account of ill health. The services on Sunday and all of next week will be in charge of the Session. The Session is doing all in their power to help make the meeting a success. We ask the members of our church to turn in and help us. We cannot make a success of it unless the members stand back of us the same as we are standing back of Dr. Reeve. There will be no better tonic for our minister than for him to know that we are all doing all we can to make the meetings go.

Now, listen to this: On Sunday night at the usual hour there will be an old-fashioned song and prayer service, there will special music and good singing. Everybody come and bring your neighbors along. BE SURE AND BRING YOUR RED BACK SONG BOOK ALONG. It will be a great inspiration to the officers of the church if you will give us your support. Bring the children along and let them help us sing. Do not make any other arrangements for Sunday night. Come to the song service, it will do us all good.

CHEAPLY BOUGHT

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

Albion Dale was in no mood for trifling, nor even for the exercise of his usual kindly, congenial and co-operative nature. His impulse was to evade or pass by a little boy and girl who, spying him, ran eagerly in his direction. He forced a smile and tried to act quite the big brother, for the little fellow was the brother of Miss Lois Beverly, which meant worlds to Albion.

Not so much just now, however, as a week previous, for a strange and puzzling change had come over the lovely and beloved sister of little Ned. Its mystery and puzzling uncertainty enforced constant mental speculation as to the cause and possible results. While Albion, after a charming acquaintance with Lois of many months, had arrived at a point where he was about to confess his love, she seemed suddenly to become a different being. On one occasion he came upon her in tears. During two subsequent calls she was sad, pale and reticent, and arranged it so that he had no opportunity to see her alone. Then she was "not at home" one evening, and the next day he received a note from her in response to his own, cancelling a party engagement upon which there had been an agreement of mutual attendance.

So those were distressing and unsatisfactory days to the ardent lover, held at a distance and helpless to dissipate the cloud that surrounded the object of his truest affection. Albion assumed a casual smile as little Ben and a girl of his own age reached his side. The hands of each were filled with an incongruous heap of cards, envelopes and folded bits of paper.

"Oh, Mr. Dale!" piped the girl excitedly, "we're postmasters, and we're selling letters. These" extending some canceled post cards, "are a penny apiece."

"Give me five," encouraged Albion. "With the envelopes tied with ribbon, mine are three for a nickel," announced little Ben. "All except this big one. That's a real letter, and it's three cents. I found it on sister's writing desk."

"Run along to the candy store, little mail carriers," directed Albion, and thrust his unique purchases in his pocket. He thought no more of them until he had reached home. Then he drew them forth to deposit in the waste basket. He noticed his three-cent investment with a token of interest as he recalled what little Ben had said regarding it. Involuntarily, almost, he opened a folded sheet.

It was written from Yorkton and signed "Alex Tyrrell." It was very brief, addressed to Miss Lois Beverly, and read: "I shall be at room 57, Holland hotel, until Tuesday evening. I warn you that if the two hundred dollars is not produced by then, I will make the document public."

The letter was a shock to Albion. Its gross threat and familiarity stunned him. Was it possible that the documents covered some past entanglement of the woman he loved? Oh, never! never! Albion banished the thought. The writer, however, was, to say the mildest, a blackmailer. His eyes flashed. Instantaneously he decided what he would do. His should be the function to meet this Alex Tyrrell and learn his secret power, and rescue the girl he idolized from the pending menace.

That same day he reached Yorkton. It was early in the evening when Albion located the Holland hotel and room 57. He knocked at its door. It was opened by a mean-faced young man.

"This is Mr. Tyrrell?" inquired Albion.

"Well, I can take a message for him," was the guarded answer.

"I come from Miss Lois Beverly."

"That's all right," promptly replied the man. "Come in. If she sent a little necessary package, the rest is easy."

"Two hundred dollars, I believe?"

"That's the sum," answered Tyrrell.

"And I get in return?"

"The notes that are signed by Miss Beverly's brother. Of course, she has told you that they represent gambling debts, and include some signatures he had no right to simulate."

Albion took $200 from his pocket. He recalled that Wendell Beverly, the brother of Lois, had married a few months previous, and that he had formerly been somewhat reckless and dissipated.

"Those are all?" he questioned as a little package was tendered.

"Yes. See here," said Tyrrell, viewing Albion with speculative eyes. "I fancy you have a peculiar interest in the young lady. The returned notes will subdue her tears. For another hundred, though, I will tell you something that will make her very happy."

He placed himself near the door, a table between himself and his visitor as he spoke. Silently Albion produced the money mentioned.

"All right, then," grinned Tyrrell. "Her soul can rest in peace. Her brother gambled, but the notes are phony, and he never signed them."

"You sound!" cried Albion, and lifted his fist, but Tyrrell made speed in getting out of the room and beyond his reach.

"Cheaply bought! Dear, anxious fons!" murmured Albion rapidly, and left the place confident and happy.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and so quickly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. It simply dangles a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By using the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Vera Cruz.
Vera Cruz has the unique record of having been twice captured by American forces, once in 1914 when we were at war with Mexico, and again in 1917, when we were not at war with Mexico. However, all we seem to do with it after we get it is to give it back again, so its citizens probably feel little worried at the vicissitudes of war. Indeed, they have recently raised a statue in honor of the noble defenders of Vera Cruz against the gringos, which shows that they feel they are adequately protected.

Look to Future Food Supply.
Owing to the shortage of imported foodstuffs, the production of foodstuffs locally is being encouraged by the Straits Settlements and the Federated Malay states. Even some of the rubber plantations have been compelled to utilize portions of their acreage for food products. This stimulation of agriculture has created interest in mechanical means to increase production, and a shipment of tractors made recently sold readily.

Sun's Immensity.
The sun, which is by no means a large star, as stars go, could easily contain within its boundaries the entire earth and moon and the distance between them. The Scientific American, in fact, three systems like that consisting of earth and moon could be strung out in a row through the center of the sun, without coming within 50,000 miles of his surface on either side.

Benefit in Joy Giving.
When you once get started in joy giving it's easy to keep it up. The fact that you give joy brings candidates for your magic touch constantly before you. The returning benefits of having given joy keep you supplied with the means of joy giving. So you just direct the ever enlarging stream that through you ministers to your fellows. And your own joy increases with each new expression of your good will. The joy giving habit grows upon you and you would be perfectly miserable without the chance of helping others to happier days. It's real joy.—Grit.

Proper Food.

There is no end to the discussion of the influence of dietetics on the health. In that discussion we find much said about calories, proteins, and food values generally. In the meantime the people seem to be eating what they want, mindless of calories or proteins. The scientific facts concerning food have no more effect upon people than on the woman in the Chicago settlement, who refused some healthful sandwich and stew, saying she would eat what "she'd rather." It is almost impossible to hold people down to scientific dietetics. Take calories, for instance, the ruling element in food, but which sometimes are not as loudly called for as at other times and by other appetites, but no one thinks of calories. One takes the food that suits his palate, without any reference to the chemistry of it. But the food problem that does not include the habit problem is not to be commended. Good habits and good food go together. A person of bad habits wants bad food. A person of good life wants his air pure, his talk pure, his food pure. As a man thinks in his stomach so is he, also.—Ohio State Journal.

Pays to Be Straight.

There's a satisfaction in living up to your obligations. Only the man who consistently meets his bills can look the world in the face without either feeling shame or acting the lie. It makes a fellow step with a finer tread when he knows that he has done his best and that no one can call him a slacker or point toward him the finger of scorn. Sometimes he may feel burdened by this constant living up to ideals when others don't, but the load will soon become one of satisfaction as conscience declares approval. You can't do better than live up to your sense of obligation.—Grit.

Learning.

Learning taketh away the wildness and barbarism and fierceness of men's minds, though a little superficial learning doth rather work a contrary effect. It taketh away all levity, temerity, and insolency by copious suggestions of all doubts and difficulties, and acquainting the mind to balance reasons on both sides, and to turn back the first offers and conceits of the kind, and to accept nothing but the examined and tried.—Bacon.

Accuracy Better Than Speed.

People who go in for speed records are not as wise as they think they are, for speed without accuracy is of no avail. True, time is at a premium in every line these days and we should not under any circumstances waste a minute unnecessarily. But if we aren't sure about any phase of our work, we must take sufficient time to go into it and not rely on chance to help us where we can possibly help ourselves.

Not in Bull's Class.

Peter was out exercising his bulldog when a small white poodle ran up to the gate and began barking through the cracks of the gate at Peter's bulldog, which made him growl and raise his bristles as if he would chew the poodle up. Peter said to his dog: "Drop your bristles, Bull; nothing doing with such a little dog like that."
